EDITOR: KEIRON RICHARDS

Nationalism Today is the radical voice of British Nationalism. It is printed, published and distributed by the N.T. Press. Editorially it supports the National Front.

Unless specifically stated to the contrary, the views expressed in signed articles or letters are solely the responsibility of their authors and do not represent the views of the Editor, N.T. or the National Front.

The appearance of any advertisement in Nationalism Today is not necessarily indicative that the Editor has any knowledge of, or interest in, or support for the product, service, organisation or function advertised.

The Editor is pleased to receive manuscripts of articles from readers for possible publication. These should be typed in double-spacing and normally be no longer than 1,250 words. No payment is made for articles published - which become N.T. copyright unless authors specifically request otherwise at the time they submit their manuscripts. The Editor reserves the right to shorten or otherwise amend articles accepted for publication should shortage of space or editorial judgement require such alterations to be made.

Those wishing to reprint articles from Nationalism Today are welcome to do so, provided that they include with the reprinted article the author's name, and the name and address of Nationalism Today.

EDITORIAL

APRIL 1986 ISSUE NO. 38

BUILD THE MAGAZINE!

ALL OVER the country reports from NF activists, and street-sellers of NF literature, are the same: the public's demand for NF publications is growing significantly.

This factor, combined with the steady growth in the number of active NF units, gives us the opportunity to transform Nationalism Today.

The monthly circulation of Nationalism Today, is over five times what it was in 1980 when NT was first launched. In its infancy NT's circulation was inevitably limited, and financially it was a struggle to survive. Now NT is close to a 'breakthrough' point. Already our sales income covers our basic production costs (which is more than most political journals can claim). A substantial increase in circulation would enable us to produce a very much more politically effective magazine.

Full-time research journalists could be employed, the editorial and graphics staff could be extended, full-colour pictures could be printed (if Today can do it so can Nationalism Today!) and the publication of additional material could be financed.

For example we would love to publish a well-researched exposé of the anti-British rag Searchlight. Produced by a squalid collection of criminals, child-molesters, Zionists and Communists it is asking to be exposed and discredited. Only a shortage of funds holds us back.

TARGET

That's why NT has set itself the target of raising circulation by 50% over the next five issues. It will not be easy – but it will certainly be worth it. Obviously a lot of the hard work is going to fall on the shoulders of those NF activists who have built NT to its present level – but there is a lot that YOU, the reader, can do to help.

But to start off the campaign to raise our circulation we are only asking readers to do one small thing: SUBSCRIBE!

A large and stable number of subscribers to each issue provides the firm circulation base that is vital to the success of any non-Establishment political publication. By subscribing readers will not only guarantee getting NT to read every month but they will be making a vital contribution to its development.

The Subscription Form on page 23 lists some of the benefits you gain from subscribing to NT. We hope though that you will consider the fact that you have helped our successful growth to be the greatest benefit of all.

Read this magazine! If you like it, if you believe in the Nationalist cause it supports, then don't delay – help build the magazine by taking out a subscription today.

Defending our People

Peter Turpin – Interviewed in his local newspaper.

The copper who turned Front

Ex-bobby heads reborn party

ONE of the most dangerous trends over the last ten years has been the politicization of the police force. Increasingly the suppression of political dissent is being given a higher priority than the maintenance of fair laws and the protection of society.

Nationalism Today has concentrated on condemning the political implications of this trend: the fact that the police are being used to suppress all so-called "extremist" political viewpoints. In doing so we have tended to ignore the other side of the coin: the rise in violent street crime, particularly that caused by the withdrawal, for political reasons, of policemen from "sensitive" multi-racial areas.

Now we're glad to report an encouraging new trend: ordinary Britons are banding together to protect their homes, families and local communities, and in one Borough of London the National Front is taking the lead in helping to protect the local community.

Ex-policeman Peter Turpin, the Organiser of the newly-formed Epping Forest Branch, has won excellent publicity for the Party by organising anti-vandal vigilante patrols, on the local Debden Estate. "We have been conducting patrols on the estate walking around in pairs. Everyone we have spoken to is all for it", Peter told his local newspaper.

Anti-racist morons, upset by the success of Peter's defence of his local community, reacted by sending him an "anonymous" death threat. Fortunately as anti-racists aren't exactly intelligent their idea of an "anonymous" letter was to "tippex" over their address on the headed notepaper sent their threats on! Even the "real" police aren't having too much difficulty in tracing the culprits.

● Peter Turpin: You'll have to go, said police.

Peter Turpin isn't the first constable to realise that he can serve and protect the British people better in the NF than in HM Constabulary, and he won't be the last. Nationalism Today has a simple message to all policemen: Serve the People, not the State! Join the National Front!

White Pupils Under Attack !

VICIOUS assaults by Blacks has led a number of senior White pupils to walk out of University Community School in Liverpool. The walk-out was because they were concerned about their safety. A group of White pupils and their parents saw the head master who attempted to play down their fears. But local councillor Geoffrey Smith, said that the situation at the school had "been a cause of concern for some time now" and that White pupils had felt threatened by Black pupils.

Mrs Pat Brookes, leader of the city's parent action committee said that the school had received problems of this kind for months. She stated that the pupil's parents were "very worried. There's an awful lot of racial tension bubbling at the school and it is only just under control". Mr Ken Antcliffe, Education Officer confirmed that seven boys had refused to attend classes as the head master could not guarantee their safety. He backed this by claiming that there was "mugging everywhere". Which shows just how bad ethnic areas are and, even worse, that it is becoming accepted.

ACTION

If the victims were Black no doubt immediate action would have been taken, but because of the fear of being branded a racist or of losing the ethnic vote these incidents are overlooked.

The only solution is for the White pupils to defend themselves with help from the White community as a whole. If they fail to do this they face mounting oppression as the ethnic population continues to grow many times faster than that of the Whites.

Mangaliso Sobukwe Who?

PARKS AND POOLS will be given tongue twisting names in honour of "eminent" Blacks by the Labour-controlled Lambeth council. Among the 28 changes are:— Zephanie Mothopeng Park – better known as Brockwell Park in Herne Hill, but now to bear the name of an anti-apartheid campaigner in a Soweto jail. "This will always be Brockwell Park" said a local woman, Sharon Cain, as she strolled through the park. "It's been that way ever since Queen Victoria rode around here in her coach. This idea is just stupid".

Sakatvaia Field – otherwise known as Myatts Field, which is to be named after the former Communist MP. "It sounds too foreign to me" said Neville Wright as he sat in the park "People will get lost".

Mangaliso Sobukwe Pool – Streatham Baths to the locals who may not have heard of the founder of the pan-African Congress.

HERITAGE

Although these changes still have to be approved by a full council meeting it is a great threat to Lambeth's local history and heritage. The Marxist leaders of the council are attempting to distort history and destroy people's links with their nation by introducing names of foreigners they don't know, and can't even pronounce, in place of names linked to that area since living memory, whose origins go back hundreds of years. How long before they rename London, Mandela City?

One of the names to be used however is that of novelist Chester Himes, who is best known for his two ferocious Black cops 'Coffin' Ed Johnson and 'Gravedigger' Jones who would have utterly despised White liberals like Ted Knight. They believed the only way to get law and order in Harlem was to blow the mobsters off the face of the earth – which would hardly meet with the approval of Paul Boateng's Police Committee.

NO JOKE

"Anti-racist and anti-sexist approach to teaching electricity and electronics"; "Anti-sexist and anti-racist approach to teaching acids and bases". Two courses offered to women teachers in ILEA Contact, weekly journal of the Inner London Education Authority. We didn't make this up, honest!

America - Public backs NF line

MOST OF THE British people support the National Front's view that America has far too much influence on British Government policy and that Americans should not be allowed to buy up British industry. The British public also widely shares the NF's analysis that both superpowers pose an equal threat to World peace, America as much as the Soviets. These views were revealed in a MORI poll carried out for the Sunday Times on February 21st. They come as a stinging rebuke from the people of Britain to Thatcher's grovelling pro-Americanism; Norman Tebbit's gutter abuse of everyone who doesn't want our country to be run from Wall Street, and the Tories' evident intention to sell what is left of British industry to the Yanks.

The poll showed that most British people think that the British Government pays too much attention to American views – 61% think this. 67% think America has too much control in the vital field of British defence. Over half the people think America has too much of a share of British industry and the British economy. 59% are fed up with endless American rubbish appearing on British TV (only 22% actually like it!) On President Reagan, most Britons agree that his judgement is unsound and he cannot be trusted to look after British interests. 54% see either America as the bigger threat (20%) or both superpowers as an equal threat (34%) to world peace.

Perhaps most encouragingly, not only do two-thirds of Britons share the NF's fundamental rejection of American society and values, but this represents a growing long term trend. In 1942, when Gallup asked "if the British people would be better off if we were more like the Americans in many respects", 41% said yes, 39% no, and 20% didn't know. Today, only 22% say yes, a massive 67% said no and only 11% don't know.

TORY SELLOUT

On the question of keeping British industry British, rejection of the Tory sellout was overwhelming. On Land-Rover, 90% think it should be kept in British hands. On British Leyland, 77% think it should stay British – even if the Americans could run it more successfully in terms of profit, a heartening victory of patriotism over greed. Thatcher, on the other hand, has said BL cannot stay British indefinitely at the taxpayer's expense. Two-thirds of the British people think that a takeover of Land-Rover and BL Trucks, as currently touted by Whitehall, would be "bad for Britain".

These reflections of British public opinion will make grim reading for Thatcher and her puppet master Reagan. In mid-February Thatcher said that British patriotic hostility to the Yanks worried her "a great deal" because it would "harm the Government's drive for more American investment in Britain" – ie. the Tories' plan to sell off more and more of our industry to Americans. Thatcher says we need the Yanks' investment capital, but the figures prove this to be a typical Tory lie. For, whilst American investment in Britain stands at 33 billion dollars, British capital exported to America is 38 billion dollars.

These facts prove that if, as the NF demands, the Yanks were kicked out of Britain economically as well as militarily at the same time as British fat cats were compelled to bring their money home, British industry would actually be 5 billion dollars better off. So much for our "needing American investment". We don't need their money, and we don't want their soldiers, warplanes and Cruise missiles garrisoning our country. The British people and the NF both say that the Yanks should pick up their dollars, their bases, their chewing gum and their soap operas and shove off home!

Margaret Thatcher – Kept on a short lead by U.S. President Ronald Reagan

Grim as the peoples' verdict on their US policy may be for Thatcher & Co., it is encouraging for us in the NF. Yet again, our policies are proved to be what the British people really want. Just as on Immigration, where a Daily Mail poll in January showed that almost two-thirds of the British public saw the mere presence of Coloured communities in our country as "a problem" and thought the answer was that they should go back to their own countries. Only the NF advocates this policy, and only the NF agrees with the British public on the Common Market, Capital Punishment, Defence ("yes to a British nuclear deterrent. No to Cruise!") and many other issues, as poll after poll has proved. The NF's great strength is that our policy platform overwhelmingly reflects the basic feelings of the British people.

Our great weakness, which we must make it our primary task to overcome, is that the British people don't realise and accept this yet. Once they do, once they realise that the National Front is not a "Nazi Front" or a "hooligans' Front" but a British peoples Front, the organised expression and embodiment of the peoples' will , then we will be on our way to power with a vengeance. And then let Reagan, Thatcher and their successors tremble!

E.E.C. Threatens Wales

THE LATEST BLOW to the continued existence of a distinctive Welsh nation revolves around the financial state of Wales' agriculture. The Farmer's Union of Wales has warned of a mass exodus from the land in the new year as a result of uncertainties over the future of British agricultural policies, coupled with the burden of high interest rates. A further cut in milk production as demanded by the EEC may be the final blow for the many Welsh dairy farmers.

The seemingly hopeless future is forcing many Welsh farming families to actually consider moving to farms in France, Already an estate agent in Hoverford-West, Lees Thomas, is planning to open a special office to promote the idea of migrating to France. There are clear financial advantages in a French agricultural system noted for its heavy subsidies; anyone under 35 who goes into farming is automatically eligible for a £10,000 grant and cheap loans.

NO MONEY

The Farmer's Union of Wales reports that while British farmers as a whole suffered a 30% cut in income last year, in West Wales it was near 50% and about one quarter of local farmers made no money at all. In the 1970's Welsh farmers were encouraged to borrow to modernise and expand their farms. Then last spring the EEC ordered a 6% cut in milk production. These quotas left many farmers with bank debts, boosted by rising interest rates and no possibility of servicing the debt by increased milk production.

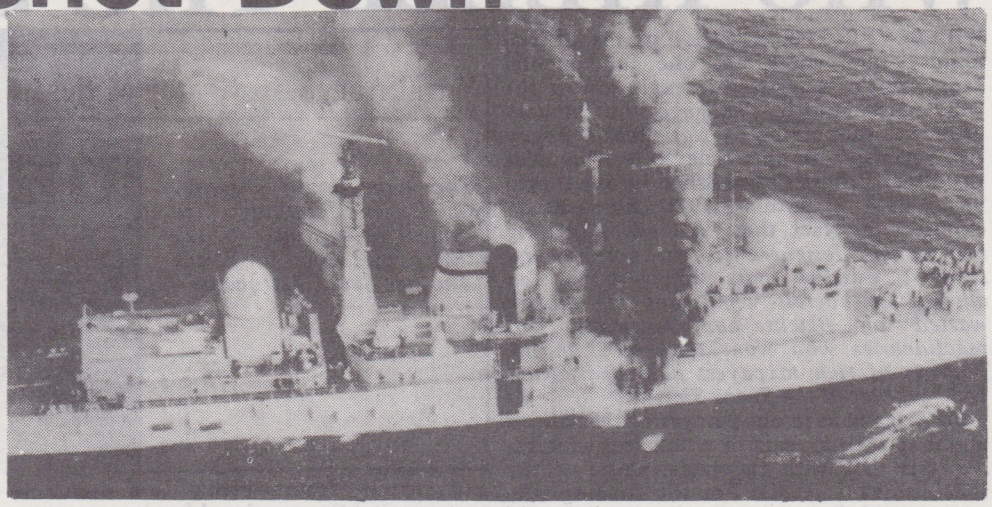
Apart from the simple economic madness of EEC policies destroying our peoples' livelihood, Gwilyn Thomas of the Farmer's Union of Wales has pointed to the threat posed to the survival of the Welsh nation. – "Rural areas are strongholds of the Welsh language and culture, so a mass exodus is not just a question of pounds, shillings and pence."

Defence Shot Down

MORE THAN three years after a Tory pledge to provide the navy's major warships with a realistic defence against guided missiles, only two have been re-equipped. No decision has ever been made on what defensive system to provide to another fourteen ships originally singled out for increased protection.

Another ship, the destroyer Bristol, will be fitted with an American Vulcan-Phalanx gun system, presently carried by the aircraft carrier Invincible when the latter begins a two-year refit in the summer. Twelve of the ships awaiting a decision for increased armament are Type 42 destroyers, sister ships of the Sheffield which was destroyed by an Exocet missile during the Falklands war.

The Daily Telegraph quoted a naval officer in the Ministry of Defence as saying the policy on anti-missile defences is "chaotic". Originally the Government purchased 9 Vulcan-Phalanx guns in 1982, but in 1983 it was decided these would not provide a reasonable certainty of destroying incoming missiles. Even so it has been decided these guns will remain the anti-missile defence of the Bristol and two aircraft carriers! Subsequently Dutch-made guns were ordered but this weapon has not even finished being tested. Equally ludicrous is that all these guns will be fitted in Cromwell class frigates which are already designed to carry the Seawolf anti-missile system.



HMS Sheffield – As much a victim of British politicians as the Argentinian Navy.

VULNERABILITY

Despite the clear vulnerability of our ships to missile attack it seems the politicians are prepared to leave our sailors defenceless because there are no obvious votes in the issue. Time and time again our servicemen have suffered unnecessarily in wars they have had to win against the odds, because the Establishment only finds the Services important when soldiers have to die to pay for political mistakes. It is the duty of the State to protect its citizens from the suffering implicit in war but it is also its responsibility to adequately equip those whose job is to defend national independence from foreign aggression.

Drawing A Blank

A DETECTIVE giving evidence in a theft trial at St. Albans Crown Court on February 18th landed in hot water himself after it was found that he had spent some minutes reading to the Court from an empty notebook.

Detective Constable Graham Ball, of Herts Constabulary based in Welwyn, after taking the oath asked the court, as coppers often do, if he could consult his notebook while giving evidence. On being allowed to do so, the Det. Constable swore he had "written his notes at the first opportunity". In fact, when the defence asked to see the notes, they turned out not to have been written at all; D.C. Ball's notebook contained not a word about the case in hand, although he had waxed eloquent about it from his 'notes' to the prosecution brief.

One of the D.C.'s colleagues, although not up to CID standards of reading from blank pages, did manage to creep out in the lunch hour and discuss his half-finished testimony with said Det. Constable, despite being specifically told not to by the Judge. P.C. Graham Weston was "severely reprimanded" by Mr. Justice Slack for thus making British justice look even more of a joke than usual. As they say, British justice must not only be seen to be done, it must be seen to be believed.

The long arm above the law

ONE of the most secretive police/state security forces is C11. The reason for C11 and similar detective squads keeping low profiles is not simply that they have to be kept secret from their targets – criminal or political – but they also work on the borderline of legality, a lot of the time on the illegal side.

Last year C11 was re-organised as part of the Commissioner's shake up of the Metropolitan Police. C11 took control of a small group of officers and civil servants known as the Technical Support Unit.

The Unit's job is to procure the gadgetry for specialist operations and to learn how to use it. This gadgetry includes such things as phone tapping, bugging, concealed cameras, 'spike mikes' which burrow through walls, and fibre optic lenses which film through a pin hole.

DIFFICULTY

The greatest operational difficulty in using this equipment is gaining access to property to plant the devices. This is where the borderline of legality is often broken, and trespass and unlawful entry often take place.

"Most of the work involved is simple surveillance" said a former C11 officer recently. "Wherever the target goes, you go. If he walks, you walk. If he gets into a car, you get in a car. If he gets in a train, you get in the train. You swap environments, that's the whole essence. You may get spotted occasionally. That's where experience comes in. Then you pull out and start again the next day rather than be blown. But you keep at them day and night. That's the name of the game".

A whole team of ten may follow one man, taking it in turns to move in close, retiring temporarily to change a coat or a car, and then returning, all the time liaising with central control through throat microphones and hidden ear pieces.

If Forces like C11 targetted only criminal suspects the fact that they operate "on the borderline of legality" would still be of substantial concern. What is, however, highly alarming is the fact that many of their targets are political. Nationalism Today therefore asks any of its readers with any knowledge of the operations of C11, or similar groups, to forward their knowledge on to us as a matter of urgency. Information from anonymous sources is also welcomed.

WHO KILLED THE SHUTTLE?

WHATEVER THE RESULT of the official inquiry now going on, one fundamental cause of the catastrophic explosion of the U.S. space shuttle Challenger on January 28th was pinpointed by Nationalism Today five years ago. In an article "U.N. Threatens the Final Frontier" published in our fourth issue, back in autumn 1980, Steve Brady exposed the fact that "Inadeqate funding has forced designers to cut corners and skimp". Funding cuts, imposed by "an alliance of liberals who want the money wasted on Blacks and Mexicans, and reactionaries who want to keep it in the pockets of rich taxpayers like themselves" had "sabotaged the Space Shuttle".

Once again, as in our pioneering revelations about scientists' fears of a "nuclear winter", NT was first with the facts, ahead of the Establishment media. For the funding cuts we exposed five years ago led to an inadequately tested Shuttle which was plagued with problems from the beginning. The original Shuttle plans called for 45 flights between 1980 and 1984: NASA managed only 17. Under new plans, the target was 24 launches a year by 1989. Last year, there were only 9. The turnaround target time for each Shuttle is 36 days, last year's average was 53. When Challenger lifted off on its doomed mission, it was already three days late, and it was due up again on May 15th to launch the Galileo Jupiter probe: any delay there would mean a 12 month postponement of an important scientific mission.

The moment of disaster: Challenger's explosion led cynical Americans to say that NASA stood for "Need Another Seven Astronauts".

GIMMICKS

The second cause of the Challenger catastrophe followed from the first. The cash-starved Space Agency had been reduced to a programme of gimmicks and stunts to win media publicity in order to arouse the interest of a jaded and decadent American public, and thereby keep itself in sufficient funds. Gimmicks and stunts such as picking Shuttle missions with a menagerie of "ethnic minorities" rather than professional astronauts in a bid to pander to the ethnic votes which control America. The ill-fated Challenger, typically, carried aloft a Black and an Oriental. Previous missions had not neglected another important political force: two Jews had been put into Space. No doubt "gays" and lesbian one-parent families would have shot skyward in due course as America's Space chiefs tried frantically to keep their media rulers happy. Christa McAuliffe, the hapless "Teacher in Space", was merely the latest gimmick dreamed up this time by the old media manipulator himself, President Reagan personally. The next mission was to have sent up a media hack – alas, that was not the one which blew up.

The American Space Programme, once a glorious adventure and pioneering effort by our Race worthy of the Vikings, had become perforce merely a minor media sideshow, run primarily for column-inches and airtime, from which it was hoped to squeeze vital Congressional funds.

MEDIA COVERAGE

So, when that precious media coverage was threatened by rocket engineers urging caution, NASA bosses, terrified that a second postponement of the "Teacher in Space" launch would cause the reporters and TV men to take their cameras away, and hence, in a land where what is not newsworthy is not deemed worthy at all, further hit funding for their real work, pressed for a "Go" regardless. With results as we saw, as the media got more story than they ever bargained for, including ample gloating footage of grief as the cameras drooled over the shattered visages of ordinary Americans seeing their loved ones die in flames before their eyes. No doubt Hollywood is planning a "movie" encore . . .

Wherever the enquiry pins the blame, the real cause of the Challenger disaster, as NT warned long ago, is the degenerate and sick American society which starves visionary idealists, who would give our Race the untold mineral and energy wealth of the Solar System, of the funds to send men and women safely beyond the sky. This society forces men and women whose eyes are on the stars to lie in the gutter, prostituting their noble dream to provide a few cheap thrills for the alien-controlled media who rule America, and whose creature sits in the White House. Consequently they feel forced to launch an under-funded, and hence unsafe, spacecraft regardless of engineers' warnings just to keep the vital media cameras rolling.

Ultimately, it was not a defective Space Shuttle which killed Christa McAuliffe and her fellow Shuttle crewfolk. It was a malfunction far more major. It was the society that is America today, a society in which the illusory visions provided by the media manipulators matter more than the genuine vision of the last American pioneers, a society which would rather gawp at the box than conquer the stars. The fire that lit the Florida sky that day was the funeral pyre of the American Dream.

Blood-Stained Veterans

ALMOST 3,000 former members of Kenya's Mau Mau terrorist gang held a reunion 60 miles north of Nairobi on February 24th. The retired terrorists' spokesman, Warurur Kanja, urged the Kenyan Government founded by their former boss Jomo Kenyatta to give medals to ex-Mau Mau "heroes" and build a monument "in their honour". The Mau Mau reunion also passed a resolution to collect and publish "information about their freedom struggle".

COCKTAIL

One wonders if that information will include the fact that in order to join the ranks of the Mau Mau "freedom fighters" each new recruit had to ceremonially quaff a cocktail delicately blended of human urine, semen and blood, after which he was sworn into the elite band in a ritual involving having sexual intercourse with a goat. Or a list of the "battle honours" of Mau Mau heroes, mostly consisting of the abduction and rape and buggery of the wives and daughters of Kenyan White settlers, after which the valiant sons of Africa hacked off parts of their victims' genitals. Some of the brutal racist oppressors thus trounced were no more than seven years old.

But one thing we can be sure the Mau Mau will be proud to publicize. A British Tory Government handed over Kenya, and many thousands of British settlers to their tender mercies. Their leader, Kenyatta, subsequently danced with the Queen at numerous Commonwealth Conferences. One presumes this "Black statesman" treated Her Majesty somewhat more gently than other White women who had come into his hands. But then, he'd got what he wanted, hadn't he?

WARNING: The US lifestyle can damage your health

THE JAPANESE are now having to confront the literally unhealthy consequences of their wholesale desire to imitate so-called Western ways. While the Japanese ability to absorb and exploit foreign technology has made Japan the second most powerful economy in the capitalist world, Western cultural influences are being blamed for a serious deterioration in the population's health.

The principal cause is believed to be the rapid Americanisation of the Japanese diet. American style fast food establishments selling Dunkin Donuts and Boskin Robbins ice cream seem to be on every corner of Japanese cities. Such junk food could hardly be more different from the traditional Japanese diet of rice, vegetables and fish. The new foods do not require anything like the same amount of chewing with the result that, according to Time magazine, the jaws of young Japanese are less well developed than their elders. This is producing an observable transformation from the traditionally round, proportionally large high cheekboned Japanese face to one that is smaller and more oval. This is bringing with it associated dentral and sinus problems that have long worried Westerners.

Some nutritionists believe that a growing incidence of obesity means Japan could become the first major country to suffer a significant fall in key health indicators such as longevity. Japan's traditional diet has often been linked with the country's low incidence of heart disease but Toshiko Sunada (an adviser to Japan's food and agriculture ministry) has said "the unwanted and unsightly problem of obesity is creeping on Japan".

PROBLEM

Japan's problem is in part that her outlook is so dominated by work that her people find such fast foods far more convenient than traditional dishes. Moreover it is now very chic in Japan to copy anything that smacks of the West (many girls are having cosmetic surgery to change the shape of their eyes).

Like the Japanese, European countries have been fatally seduced by certain aspects of American cultural imperialism. Thus we should not only sympathise with the plight of Japan, an ancient nation under attack from pernicious alien influences, but note the many different threats to the health of our own societies.

Fighting for his Nation

SALEH BARANSI is under arrest again for fighting for the basic human rights of the 650,000 Palestinians that remain in Israel. He has only spent two years as a totally free man since the end of the 1948 war. He insists that he acts entirely within the law though he supports acts of armed resistance against the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza. Barensi is chairman of the Research Centre for Arab Heritage, a cultural organisation aimed at teaching Arabs in Israel something of their own history.

From 1948 until 1956, Baransi was prevented from travelling outside his own town – like all Arabs in Israel – unless military authorities granted a permit. In 1959 he helped found one of the earliest Arab Nationalist movements in Israel, and in 1960 he lost his job as a school teacher because of his political activities.

JAILED

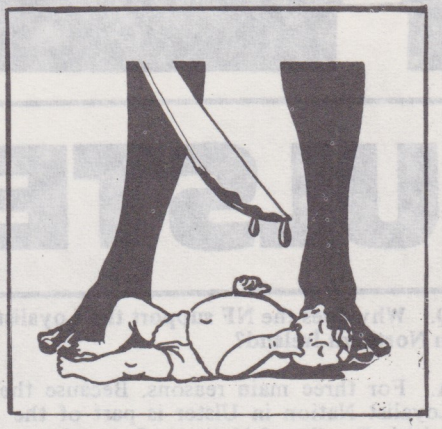
From 1960 to 1969, he was confined to Tayibeh. Then he was sent to jail, convicted by a military court of attempting to establish an illegal (Nationalist) organisation. He was sentenced to ten years, and served every day of it. In June 1980 he called for a protest strike after assassination attempts by Jewish extremists on three Arab mayors. He was again placed under house arrest, which lasted until September 1983. Then came two years of freedom which he used to found his research centre, which was funded by Palestinian businessmen. But the authorities arrested him again under 'emergency regulations' which Baransi condemns as undemocratic. Under the terms of the regulations he does not have to be told of the reasons against him.

NO ROOTS

Baransi states that "The Israelis think that if we feel that we have no roots here it will be easy to get rid of us". Despite all that he has gone through Baransi continues his fight for his nation. The National Front should give moral support to all peoples fighting against an outside occupier, as there may be a time when we will need all the support we can get. Moral and otherwise.

Saleh Baransi should be a figure of inspiration to all true Nationalists everywhere: he has resolutely and courageously dedicated his life to the liberation of his peoples from Zionist aggression and imperialism.

"PEACE IN OUR TIME"



UNLESS his political demands were met, a leading South African Black recently warned an American audience, his fellow Blacks would put poison in their White employers' coffee. They would also machine-gun school buses – "tempting targets" as they only contain White children.

The author of these dire and bloody threats? Not some gore-soaked ANC terrorist, Kalashnikov in hand. But good old lovable Desmond Tutu, Christian, Bishop of Johannesburg, darling of the world's media and winner of the Nobel Prize. For Peace, no less!

SPOTLIGHT ON POLICY

ULSTER

THE National Front Policy Department outlines NF thinking on Ulster's problems.

Q. Why does the NF support the Loyalists in Northern Ireland?

A. For three main reasons. Because the Loyalist Nation in Ulster is part of the British Family of Nations. Quite simply, they are our people. Secondly, because for hundreds of years the Ulster Loyalists have stood by the rest of the people of Britain at every moment of crisis. On the first day of the Battle of the Somme in July 1916, for example, the Ulster Volunteer Force suffered 5,500 casualties, but was the only British regiment to achieve all its first day objectives. In the Second World War the ports and airfields of Northern Ireland saved Britain from being starved into surrender by the submarine blockade. It is a matter of national honour for the British people to repay these debts by standing by Ulster in her hour of need.

Finally, the active forces of Irish Republicanism, the IRA and Irish National Liberation Army are openly Marxist. Their victory would not only bring about a bloodbath which would spill over onto the mainland, but would also create a Communist State on our doorstep and lead to subversion and terrorism aimed at the destruction of Britain.

Q. But I can't see why British soldiers should be killed and English cities should be bombed year after year just because of a religious argument between a bunch of Irishmen.

A. Well, for a start it's not a "religious quarrel between a bunch of Irishmen'. Some Catholics are staunch Loyalists and are proud of their Ulster heritage. However, since the IRA murder campaign has been directed with particular brutality against these people, they are forced to remain silent. And while, for historical reasons, the bulk of Republican supporters are Catholic, many of the leadership are atheistic Marxists and some are from Protestant families.

And the people of Ulster cannot be described as "Irish". Although Ireland is quite small, it is very wrong to see it as one Irish nation with the army maintaining British rule over its north-east corner by force. The army was sent in in 1969 to protect the Catholic minority in Ulster from sectarian rioting prompted by the Republican-manipulated "Civil Rights" campaign. The truth is that there are two Nations in the island of Ireland and that the Troubles are primarily a political and national, rather than a religious, conflict.

As already stated, there are three main reasons why we must stand by the Loyalists, but there is no reason why the killing should go on forever. The IRA terror campaign has only gone on for so long because of the weakness and incompetence of successive British governments. The Ulster security forces know the identity of virtually every one of the few hundred terrorists involved in the IRA and INLA. The only reason they still exist is the Government's "kid glove" policy which ties the hands of the security forces, even though the armed Republicans claim to have declared war on Britain. If the government would take them at their word and give the security forces a free hand, the Republican terror gangs would be destroyed within weeks.

Q. So why isn't this done?

A. For several reasons. First, the politicians employed by the British Establishment are basically liberal-minded and weak. They are incapable of truly effective action on any issue, least of all one which involves violence. Faced with such a problem they utter ritual condemnations, then bury their heads in the sand and hope it will go away.

Secondly, the Old Gang politicians are the puppets of the U.S.A. Since the Irish-American lobby has immense power, they are afraid to take effective action against Republican terror for fear of upsetting "Uncle Sam". There is also little doubt that the government of Eire has a secret agreement with the U.S. that if American pressure leads the British government to hand Ulster over to a United Ireland ruled from Dublin, Eire will in exchance allow the U.S. to set up nuclear missile bases in the South.

The third reason is that a section of the British Establishment, particularly many key Civil Service officials and intellectuals from Britain's guilt-ridden and decadent upper class, have a vicious hatred of ordinary folk who have retained community spirit and pride in their identity. Time and time again, these instinctive traitors have acted to destroy healthy groups of Britons whom they despise and fear. Whether they're swamping dockland communities or little milltowns with Coloured immigrants; replacing homes with impersonal high-rise tower blocks; handing over Rhodesia to Black Marxist terrorists, or trying to sell out the people of Ulster to the IRA, the motive, although probably subconscious, is the same.

Q. But don't you think that it's only natural that Britain should withdraw from Ireland. It was our first colony and now it's our last. It's true that the Protestants have been in Ireland for many years now, but they were "planted" there by the English Crown and by City of London financiers to keep down the native Irish, so surely it's time for them to lose their artificially privileged position?

A. It is an unfortunate fact that both sides in the long conflict in Ireland have discriminated against each other, but the Ulster Loyalists are not fighting today to maintain a privileged position – they are fighting for the right to maintain their national culture and identity. In any case, the alleged "discrimination" against Catholics has been much exaggerated. In the case of poor housing, for example, the gap between the two communities is much less significant than the gap between Northern Ireland and the rest of the U.K.

Furthermore, it is a grotesque over-simplification of the facts to portray the Ulster Protestants as the descendants of English and Scottish planters. The people of Ulster have always had a separate identity from the rest of Ireland. Early church records indicate that in some areas at least 20% of the Protestant "settlers" were in fact converts from the native population, and inter-marriage has increased with every generation. To further complicate matters, it is estimated that a quarter of the genes of the people of Eire are derived from mainland immigrants, while a large proportion of the "Scottish" planters who settled in Ulster were only returning to the land from which their ancestors had come in the Dark Ages and medieval times.

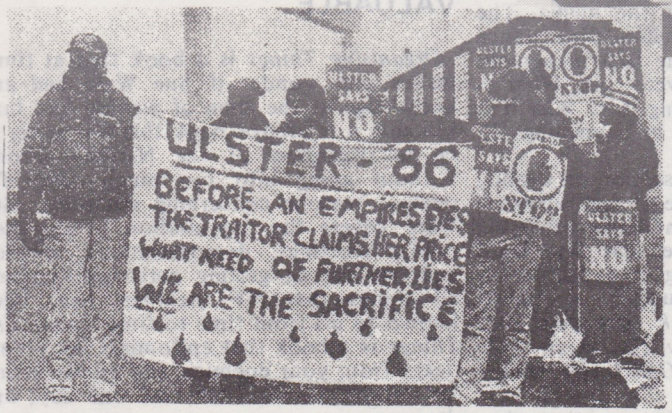
Q. So you don't see the IRA as a genuine movement of national liberation?

A. No, far from it. The truth is that the IRA are Marxist terrorists carrying out an aggressive war of Irish imperialism against the small British nation of Ulster. It is the Loyalists who are fighting a war for national survival and freedom.

The State against the Nation

RIGHT: The moment of betrayal as Margaret Thatcher signs the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

BELOW: Masked pickets at Harland & Wolff shipyard take part in the Loyalist protest against the Agreement.



Q. But it looks as if this war will go on forever. Is there any chance of peace?

A. Not if the wishes of the Loyalists are ignored and the Republicans are encouraged to think that their victory is inevitable. But that is the only possible effect of the policies of the Tory, Alliance and Labour parties, which have brought Ulster to the brink of full-scale civil war. The Labour policy of withdrawing British troops and handing Ulster over to rule by Dublin is as wrong and unworkable as the Liberal/SDP idea that two mutually antagonistic nations can be peacefully merged under one government is naive and childish. Not that the Tories are any better. The Anglo-Irish Agreement giving growing control over Ulster's affairs to Dublin is rightly seen by Loyalists as the thin edge of the wedge of Republican rule.

Q. But hasn't the government promised that Northern Ireland will remain British for as long as the majority want it to?

A. Yes, but it is clear that this promise is worthless. If it meant anything at all the Tories would have dropped the Anglo-Irish Agreement when the majority of Ulster people opposed it. The fact that Thatcher refuses to take any notice of the united voices of every Loyalist political figure and the entire Loyalist population shows just how prejudiced she, like all of the Establishment, really is against Ulster's right to survive.

In any case, even if the government keeps its promise to respect the wishes of the majority, this will not help the Loyalists in the long run, because immigration from Eire, the higher Republican birthrate and sectarian murder all mean that the majority is well on the way to becoming a minority in its own land. So even if things go on as they are the Loyalists will eventually lose and end up as a persecuted minority in a hostile and foreign state. The bloodshed that this would cause would make the present Troubles seem peaceful by comparison.

Q. So what is the answer? How can the people of Ulster gain and preserve their right to rule themselves and bring peace to their war-torn land?

A. The Loyalists must assert their rights to self-defence and to self-determination the right to run their own affairs. If the British government refuses to grant them those rights and continues its policy of sell-out, appeasement and suppression of Loyalist protest, then the people of Ulster will have no option but to declare their independence from Westminster's dictatorial rule. They will have to declare an independent, secular State of Ulster.

Q. But how would that bring peace?

A. It would not bring peace immediately, but it would make peace possible. With a secular (i.e. religiously neutral and non-sectarian) Ulster no longer ruled from Westminster or patrolled by soldiers from the mainland, no-one in the world could believe Republican propaganda about "fighting against foreign rule". The aggressive and imperialistic nature of Republican terrorism would be plain for all to see. The new State would be well within its rights to launch a short, sharp, surgical internal war to destroy armed Republicanism by rooting out known terrorists and re-introducing the death penalty for terrorist crimes and sectarian murder, whoever is responsible. With the defeat of violence, it would be possible to talk rationally about the future make-up of Ulster.

Q. But wouldn't what you are saying mean the break-up of the United Kingdom? How can you – a British Nationalist – advocate such a thing?

A. It certainly would break up the British State, but it wouldn't break the real racial, cultural and spiritual unity of the British people. Ulster has a simple choice: she can remain "loyal" to a treacherous British Establishment and accept the slow destruction of her British identity, or she can refuse to commit suicide and reject rule by Westminster and Dublin in order to remain British.

When a State has become as corrupt as the one which rules us today, it is only possible to be loyal to your Nation if you are disloyal to the State.

Q. What would happen to Ulster if the NF was in power?

A. If the NF was now governing Britain the Loyalists would not have been forced into their desperate position. But we are not and will not for many years. When we come to power, we look forward to welcoming Ulster back as an integral part of the British Nation. But that will only be possible if Ulster has survived – and a Unilateral Declaration of Independence now appears to be the only way in which Ulster's survival and British identity can be ensured and preserved.

Q. So would you say that the National Front's policies on Ulster have changed?

A. No. Our policies may still be summed up in the phrases "Smash the IRA" and "Ulster is Forever British" – it is just that it has become clear that only the people of Ulster have the power to turn these phrases into action. We will give them all the support we possibly can, but ultimately their destiny is in their hands alone.

A LOOK AT THE LATEST READING

Organising Things

ALEX MALCOLM reviews 'ORGANISING THINGS' by SUE WARD.

We regret this book is not currently in stock at Nationalist Books. We will of course inform readers when it becomes available.

IF EVER a National Front Organiser from Branch to Head Office level needed a bible then he/she need look no further than Organising Things for inspiration. Sue Ward, the authoress, has (unwittingly I'm sure) produced a book that, had it not been written with a definite left-wing slant, could have been produced for any budding official of a radical Nationalist party.

Organising Things is perhaps the first real comprehensive guide to direct political action. The book is divided into three parts which in turn are broken down into sections and sub-sections. This not only makes for easy reading but also helps the reader to find what he is looking for without having to scan through chapters that might not contain the information that is needed.

INFORMATION

Part one of Organising Things is basically about the information and resources that will be required when organising anything from a public meeting to getting leaflets for a campaign printed. Sue Ward has gathered together a list of directories and organisations from which information and aid can be gleaned which, perhaps, the average NF official would never dream of approaching. Getting funds together for any venture in politics is always a bit of a headache, but again Sue Ward has come up with some really useful methods of getting around this problem. After all not all funds for Nationalist ventures ascend from members pockets like the Phoenix from the ashes.

Part one also contains ideas on obtaining publicity and on the production of posters and leaflets. One interesting side note in this chapter and perhaps an insight into Sue Wards political sympathies is her warning on page 26 of the law on printed material. Quote: "In London, leaflets you hand out in the street must not be 'profane, indecent or obscene', you also have to be careful not to contravene the Race Relations Act (Black Power leaflets have been prosecuted for this)."

Handling the Press and media is something that really is a case of 'trial and error' and writing down guide lines on how to do so is by no means an easy task. Sue Ward has I feel filled a gap in an otherwise quite potent NF Organisers arsenal. Details on how to get the media to events by the use of press releases, and how to obtain the best possible coverage for the events, ie. Marches, Public meetings, or any activities that will get the NF good publicity. Although producing press statements is by no means a difficult task, it can be quite difficult to try and get some sort of method together for their production. This section, concerning press releases and their production, sets out how to go about press statements and what should be contained in them to get the best possible effect from the media. The main theme of any press release for instance should be contained in the first paragraph. Simple but quite effective: – A. What is happening. B. Who is doing it. C. Why it is happening. D. Where it is happening. E. When it is happening.

I feel one piece in this section on dealing with the press that will be of real relevance to the keen National Front Organiser is the following piece of advice that Sue Ward has included concerning complaints to newspapers that give unfair or unjust coverage. "If you think that you have been treated unfairly by the press, then don't just let it go by; COMPLAIN. Denise MacShane says:

If a single reporter produces a story, then no other journalist is in a position to judge its accuracy and fairness.

That is why it is so important, if a story is wrong . . . that the journalist be told so. If they are not told, they will believe they got it right . . . (they) will consider that s/he has told the truth and will base future stories on the assumption that the account is correct.

Even if your complaint does not seem to have any effect, it will make the journalist, and perhaps the editor, more careful in future. Phone up, speak to the editor, ask for a full retraction. But make sure that you are absolutely accurate in your facts before you complain. If you think that you might have said what you are reported as saying, or that someone else said or did something they are not admitting tread carefully – you could discredit the group". Sound advice, and perhaps something the National Front should have become more accustomed to doing.

VALUABLE

Organising Things is a book that at times makes one wonder if Sue Ward had any knowledge at the time of writing just how valuable a reference book this was going to be to organisers of the National Front. Without going into too much detail for obvious reasons concerning space etc, Sue Ward covers the organisation of marches, public meetings, demonstrations, lobbies, and the act of getting petitions together, all things that NF members have been known to do from time to time. Organising Things is a book that epitomises the phrase 'learn from your enemies' and we can assure Ms Ward learn we shall, and one day, one day . . . .

RACIAL REALITIES

RACE: What the Scientists Say

NF Directorate member John Field has compiled this list of quotes from some of the world's leading academic authorities on the subject of ethnology. They clearly disprove the anti-racialist claims that 'there is no difference between Black and White', and eloquently confirm that Multi-racialism is built on ignorance and myth.

"AS A social anthropologist, I naturally accept and even stress the fact that there are major differences, both mental and psychological, which separate the different races of mankind. Indeed, I would be inclined to suggest that however great may be the physical differences between such races as the European and the Negro, the mental and psychological differences are greater."

– Dr. Louis B. Leakey.

"IN RECENT years it has been fashionable to depict in glowing terms the achievements of the Negro over the past 5,000 years, although the truth is that the history of the Black African is largely a blank. Until the arrival of Europeans there was no literate civilisation in the continent's black belt. The Negro had no written language, no numerals, no calender, no system of measurement. He never developed a plough or wheel. He never domesticated an animal. With the rarest exceptions he built nothing more elaborate than mud huts and thatched stockades."

– Prof. Henry E. Garrett, Professor of Psychology, Columbia University.

"THE existence of Negro-White test score differences is hardly debatable. As far as the empirical data are concerned, the literature shows clearly that Negroes, as a group of subjects, obtain lower mean test scores than Whites as a group of subjects."

– Prof. Frank C. McGurk, Associate Professor of Psychology, Villanova University.

"WE DO know that wide individual differences exist in the anatomical and physiological properties of the human brain and that some of these are racial."

– Prof. Carlton S. Coon, Professor of Physical Anthropology, Harvard University.

"MEN are born genetically unequal. This is a fact of nature, and quite independent of the conclusions which may result from its political and sociological interpretations . . ."

–Prof. Curt Stern, Professor of Genetics, University of California.

"THE Negro brain is on the average relatively longer, narrower and flatter than the brain of Whites . . . It can be said that the pattern of the frontal lobes in the White brains of our series is more regular, more uniform than in the Negro brain . . ."

–Prof. C.J. Connolly, Professor of Physical Anthropology, Catholic University of America.

"THE Negro has the lower mental faculties (smell, sight, handicraftmanship, body sense) well developed; the Caucasian the higher (self control, will power, ethical and aesthetic senses and reason)."

–Prof. Robert Bean, Professor of Anatomy, University of Virginia.

"THE African, with his lack of total synthesis, must, therefore use his frontal lobes (of the brain) but little, and all the peculiarities of African psychiatry can be envisaged in terms of frontal idleness".

–Dr. J.C. Carothers, consultant in Mental Health, World Health Organisation.

BLACK WISDOM

"It is against God's law to integrate. It's only nature, not hatred, to keep people among their own kind. A man has to be a fool to live in any culture but his own".

– Muhammed Ali.

"NO ONE must lightly dismiss the question of race. It is the key to world history. Language and religion do not make a race, only blood does that".

–Disraeli – from his book 'Endymion'.

"APPARENTLY anyone who believes in genetic racial differences is a 'racist'. If he finds that the White man does better than a Black on a mental test he is a 'bigot'; to find the opposite is commendable and 'scientifically acceptable'.

–Prof. H. E. Garnett.

"IT WILL be seen that when we classify mankind by colour, the only one of the primary races, given by this classification, which has not made a creative contribution to any one of our twenty-one civilisations is the Black Race."

–Prof. Arnold J. Toynbee.

"IN TERMS of what is already known about human evolution, about a host of other kinds of genetic racial differences, about the relative contributions of genetic and environmental factors to differences in mental abilities, and about the constancy (relative to the variability within groups) of White-Negro differences in IQ . . . it appears highly probable that genetic factors are involved to a substantial degree in the lower average IQ of American Negroes".

–Prof. Arthur Jensen, Professor of Psychology, University of Harvard.

"THE IQ'S of American Negroes are from 15 to 20 points, on the average, below those of American Whites. Negro overlap of White median IQs' ranges from 10 to 25 per-cent – equality would require 50 per-cent . . . Negro-White differences in mean test scores occur in all types of mental tests, but the Negro lag is greatest in tests of an abstract nature – for example, problems involving reasoning, deduction, comprehension . . . Large and significant differences in favour of Whites appear even when socio-economic factors have been equated."

–Prof. Henry E. Garrett.

"THE remarkable consistency of test results . . . all point to the presence of some native differences between Negroes and Whites determined by intelligence tests."

–Prof. Audrey M. Shuey, Professor of Psychology, Randolph-Macon College.

"THE races are different in constitution, in acclimatisation, and liability to certain diseases. Their mental characteristics are also very distinct".

–Charles Darwin.

"The Mongolids and Europids did best in both these types of tests; (cognition and attainment tests) they were followed (at some distance) by the Indianids, and the Negrids were still less successful. In comformity with these results, the races among which civilisation originated and advanced were the Mongolids and Europids . . . in each relevant context the possibility of environmental causes has been reviewed in some detail, and rejected as an insufficient explanation of the facts."

Dr John Baker, Oxford University.

"When man alone is considered, certain facts bearing on the relation between brain-size and intelligence do stand out. In particular the fossil evidence shows clearly enough that the organ has increased progressively in volume in the course of human evolution, and that these ethnic taxa (the Australid for instance) that are primative morphologically in other respects have retained to some extent the smaller cranial capacity of man's ancestors. Further, no person recognized as eminent in mathematics, science, philosophy, or any other purely intellectual subject has ever been a member of a taxon (i.e. ethnic grouping – Ed.) in which the average cranial capacity is low."

Dr. John Baker.

Media Hysteria !

NOT SINCE 1979 has the National Front been subjected to so much media hysteria and abuse as it's faced in the last year.

Ever since the Heysel Stadium disaster there have been regular anti-NF "scare stories" in the press. One of the most lurid appeared recently in the Yorkshire Post.

This was a classic piece of "Shock! Gasp! Horror!" journalism. In one week-long feature the Yorkshire Post managed to incorporate just about every anti-NF smear story conceivable. A small number of extracts are reproduced here for the amusement of NT readers.

The reason for the smears becomes apparent when you ignore the lurid headlines and concentrate on the small print:— "After years of declining membership party ranks have grown by 300% in the last 12 months." Not only that but "the nature of the modern National Front makes it an altogether more sinister organisation". Quite simply the Establishment is getting seriously worried at the rebirth of British Nationalism over the last few years.

It's clear that a lot of the Yorkshire Post's propaganda backfired on them. The courage of the NF's attack on the pro-IRA "Bloody Sunday" march won the party much sympathy and support. Moreover, their attempt to whitewash the IRA, Sinn Fein, Labour Party and sundry Marxist marchers on the "Bloody Sunday" parade as merely being 'pro-Irish" must have opened many peoples eyes, and made them realise how anti-British the Yorkshire Post is, and what little respect it has for the truth.

"POLICE EXAMINE NF TERROR LINKS" is a good lurid headline that doubtless helps to sell newspapers (and hopefully magazines – that's why we reprinted it on our front cover!) but it has nothing to do with reality. It appears that this lurid claim was made on the basis that one member may have handed out a few leaflets about the UDA at one NF Branch meeting.

This hardly constitutes solid evidence of a high-level terrorist link, especially when it is remembered that the UDA is a perfectly lawful organisation.

To set the minds of our readers at rest the NF does not have nor will it have, any links with terrorist organisations. Nor, in fact do we have any links with the UDA either. We do however respect the UDA for the way it has helped to defend ordinary Loyalists from IRA terror, and we hope that they respect us for our work in defending British people and the British way of life on the mainland.

The Yorkshire Post – and the media in general – have yet to learn that "scare stories" about the NF are not nearly as effective as they once were. Internally the NF is composed of much more dedicated and politically aware members than a decade ago: smear stories don't scare us, they merely amuse. Externally the public is getting weary of lurid exposés; bourgeoise respectability is not what it was.

Finally – congratulations to Leeds Branch! It was your dedicated work in promoting the Cause of national liberation that led to the Yorkshire Post's hysterical outburst. Keep up the good work!

THE CHAIRMAN of the National Front, Mr. Martin Wingfield, yesterday refused to condemn all violent acts by his members.

He had told a Yorkshire Post reporter that: "The National Front doesn't support violence of any sort, it is totally alien to everything that British people believe."

But later, when he was challenged over convictions for violence among some prominent Front members, he changed his statement and condemned "mindless" violence.

He said that there were cir cumstances where the Nationa Front disciplinary hearings — which adjudicate in the event of a member being threatened with expulsion from the party because of violent acts — would find violence excuseable: "If someone was being attacked at a march, or if he was protecting his mates."

Tory MP wins Front debate

By DAVID SAPSTED, Political Staff

THE FRIGHTENING rise in the National Front's activities in West Yorkshire is to be debated in the Commons next week.

Mr. Gary Waller (Con, Keighley) secured the debate last night in the wake of the Yorkshire Post's revelations earlier this week of the rise in NF violence in the county.

The debate, scheduled for a week tomorrow, is on Mr. Waller's private motion on: "The threat posed by anti-democratic movements in West Yorkshire."

He commented: "After reading the alarming facts revealed by the Yorkshire Post, I felt this was a subject that needed to be debated.

"There is no doubt that, since the NF changed its tactics from contesting elections to courting support among the young and the adoption of militant and violent tactics, they do

Racist skinhead bands like Screwdriver, Brutal Attack, Diehards and ABH command fanatical support from the national body of skinheads, and hardly a week goes by without a meeting for the skinhead gangs to attend.

Songs are basic and abusive. In one record bought by the Yorkshire Post the band leader repeatedly chants the words "Nigger, Nigger." The usual themes are apparent in the titles, "Return of St. George" and "White Working Class Man."

Getting the boot in n Bloody Sunday

A deputy headmaster in Bradford and the president of Vishaw Hindu Parishad, Mr. Rajinder Johar, said: "The Community Relations Council is not doing anything to help us. If we are forced to make petrol bombs to protec ourselves then we will."

THE annual march in London to commemorate the Bloody Sunday shootings in Londonderry 14 years ago is a popular day out with members of Leeds branch of the National Front. In the eyes of NF members, pro-Irish marchers are synonomous with the IRA and communism, and as such offer a legitimate target for the boot bottle.

A NEW STYLE National Front now poses a greater threat to public order and racial harmony than before.

After years of declining membership the party ranks have grown by 300 per cent. in the last 12 months. The present estimated membership of 3,000 to 4,000 is a fraction of the 17,000 cardholders claimed during the party's halcyon days of the mid-1970s, but the nature of the modern National Front makes it an altogether more sinister organisation.

The party has already established links with international right-wing terrorist groups, including the Ulster Defence Association, and is building an army of young fanatics —

The aim is to broaden the appeal of the party to a wider cross-section of the community, to special interest groups, and most importantly an alienated youth facing long term unemployment.

The message is being projected via a more sophisticated propaganda machine than ever before.

A constant stream of cleverly phrased handbills are fed to party branches nationwide, tapping into the British sense of fair play on issues of the day from Halal meat to the IRA.

The party's newspapers, National Front News and Bulldog (paper of the Young NF), are well laid out in contrast to the amateurish efforts of the past, while a range of glossy magazines carry lengthy theoretical writings.

In the Front's glossy magazine Nationalism Today parallels are drawn with the Samurai warriors and the Spartans of Greece, while Gadaffi and Iranian fundamentalists are defied in meandering feature articles. It is all part of the new leadership's campaign to reshape the image of the Front as a more potent revolutionary force.

Nerve centre of the party's new machine

THE LONG-established local branch structure of the National Front plays a crucial role in providing the means and the money to translate party policy into direct action on the streets.

Without this essential cog in the party machine the likes of Pearce and Griffin and Wingfield could possibly be dismissed as harmless fanatics. But with local party operations firmly under their control these young neo-Nazis have been transformed into dangerous generals of a new terrorist force.

Control of branches has passed into the hands of the fanatics with a smooth and subtle redirection of policy. In Leeds

The influence of the Le branch runs not just through West Yorkshire but north i Newcastle. Leeds activists h played a major role in establishment of a thrivi National Front branch in north-east.

CLIVE WAKELY

A LESSON IN SOLIDARITY

REPATRIATION. The mere word sends Establishment politicians and media recoiling in horror. The whole idea is 'extremist' and 'impossible', and anyone who even contemplates the idea is politically 'beyond the pale'. Yet repatriation is nothing new, and has been used as a means of preserving the ethnic character of the British peoples since the earliest manifestation of coloured immigration in Elizabethan times.

Repatriation has even been practiced in this century! In this article Clive Wakely examines the effect of coloured immigration in Liverpool, after the First World War, and the response of the British people then.

"THERE WERE further disturbances directed against the coloured population in the South-end of Liverpool yesterday. Several houses were raided by White men and bonfires made of the furniture, and late last night about 500 coloured men were rounded up and taken to the Bridewells for protection.

Last nights' raids were in the neighbourhood of Stanhope Street and Hull Street, and were carried out by a band of White men. Forcibly entering some of the houses, they threw the furniture out into the street and set it on fire. Large crowds assembled and it was with some difficulty that the police cleared the streets".

The above and following passages record actual events as they were reported in the provincial press and are not, as some may have first thought, the fanciful imaginings of some over-active mind. The year was 1919 and the location Liverpool, then as now, a city of much unemployment and real hardship.

Many of the Negroes then residing in Liverpool had arrived as seamen during the war years and easily found employment in the City's labour starved factories and docks; replacing men who had either volunteered for, or had been conscripted into, the war against the Kaiser.

WHITE RESENTMENT

As the war years passed and their numbers increased, so did the level of White resentment and indignation over their presence, particularly their involvement with White prostitution. But it was not until 1919 that the situation escalated into widespread violent disorder, for in June of that year the City was rocked by a series of race riots.

The return to the City of thousands of demobbed servicemen fresh from the blood-glutted fields of Flanders rapidly brought matters to a head. They had not returned, as the politicians had promised, to a 'land fit for heroes' but to a city of epidemics, grinding poverty and unemployment. To add insult to injury many employers who had, in fits of public patriotic fervour, promised to hold jobs open for servicemen pending their return, from the trenches, had subsequently come to the realisation that Negro labour was cheap and therefore good for business.

So June 1919 saw Liverpool making national headlines as the City experienced the fury of a White backlash. Large numbers of mounted police were deployed to contain the situation and to protect the Negroes from the wrath of the White populace, an action that certainly saved many Negro lives.

'Elder Dempster's boarding-house in Stanhope Street was surrounded last night by a crowd, which broke the windows, and one of the mounted policemen engaged in dispersing the assemblage was injured by a missile'.

'With the object of preventing an occurence of racial fighting in the district of Pitt Stret and Mill Street, the streets in the South-end of Liverpool yesterday were patrolled by a considerable number of Police and, although no serious disturbances took place during the day many coloured men were taken into custody for their own safety. In order to guard against rioters contingents of mounted police rode round the affected area, and their presence no doubt checked any attempt to organise a dangerous confrontation'.

In an attempt to defuse the explosive situation (at least one Negro had died in the rioting), the police began rounding-up the Negroes and placing them in protective custody. The authorities were in a difficult position, for they could neither release the Negroes for fear of renewed rioting, nor could they accommodate them for any length of time. In desperation the Home Secretary was consulted and the course of repatriation urged upon him by both Liverpool's police chiefs and its Lord Mayor.

'In the Liverpool main Bridewell there are now over 700 Negroes who have been conveyed there for their own personal safety. The number is hourly increasing, as the police are removing more of them to this place of refuge. The authorities are somewhat embarrassed by the position created inasmuch as it is realised that the Coloured men cannot be housed in the Bridewell indefinitely. The police have communicated with the Home Secretary on the subject of repatriation, and also on the situation generally, and await his reply.

Sixty years on and coloured immigration has once again brought rioting to our city streets.

A suggestion has been made that the Home Secretary might select some place in which the Negroes could be voluntarily interned until transport could be secured to enable them to return to their homes in West Africa and the West Indies.'

The violence was far from being one-sided. Police arrived in strength after learning of a large gathering of Negroes and after searching them found many to be in possession of deadly weapons.

'When the seventy men were removed from the Ethiopian Hall it was found that many of them had weapons in their possession, mostly razors, and the action of the police in taking the Negroes to Cheapside probably averted a very serious disturbance'

Anti-Negro feeling also ran high amongst the seamen of other European nations as the following report illustrates:

'Five persons are now in hospital as the result of the desperate affray between Negroes and Danes in the region of a public-house near Great George Square last night. P.C. Brown, who was shot in the mouth, is reported to be only fairly comfortable. Nine men, all told, were admitted and five, including the constable, were detained. The others were Russians, Poles and Danes'.

PROVOCATION

To some of Liverpool's impoverished Whites the sight of an affluent Negro in a taxi proved too much of a provocation,

'The most sensational occurrence in this connection, however, occurred when a car in which a Coloured gentleman holding a good position on one of the Liverpool liners was driven along Russell Street. A number of roughs stopped the car, pulled him out and appropriated his luggage, which contained about £175 in notes and a quantity of jewellery. Some of the property was recovered by detectives who promptly made investigations. The money, however, has not been found.'

In spite of chronic unemployment many Whites were prepared to put their own jobs at risk by refusing to work with Negroes.

'The friction which has arisen has extended to one of the big factories in the City in which Black men have been employed for some time. One large manufacturer has sacked their Black employees, as the men in their service refuse to work with them.'

Most of the detained Negroes were eventually repatriated to their lands of origin and further race riots were averted.

These contemporary press reports are reproduced here not simply because they are interesting in themselves, but rather because they show a trait of the British character that I feel is in danger of extinction:– that is White solidarity.

BACKLASH

In today's Britain a backlash of the type that gripped Liverpool and other major cities in 1919 is almost unthinkable. Would today's employed tear themselves away from their colour televisions and videos to demand employment for their less fortunate countrymen? Can you see Police chiefs or Lord Mayors slipping away from their masonic functions to propose repatriation as a cure for racial strife? The answer to both these questions is an emphatic NO, which in itself is an indication of how far we as a nation have declined since 1919.

If we possessed the solidarity of our forefathers then Britain today would be a much different and far better country in which to live. We would not have a colour problem because White solidarity would have prevented one from developing in the first place.

It is not, however, the purpose of this article to engage in post mortems upon the corpse of White solidarity. It is hoped that by bringing a historic example to the attention of the reader that it's strength and potential can be realised. It remains to all of us to search for the key to its resurrection, for it is the key that unlocks the very door of power.

Making Democracy Work

DAVE GOBELL

THE ARTICLE by Michael Fishwick entitled 'The Structure of Folk Government' (NT 36) touched on a subject which has received scant attention within Party circles. Obviously this subject needs to be worked out and debated at greater length, however I do feel that the framework on which a future Nationalist administration should operate has already been outlined.

I was pleased to note that the idea of liberal mass democracy was rejected. Almost everyone believes that democracy is good, because that is what they have been constantly told to believe. However not many people could tell you why democracy is good. In short they have been conditioned into accepting the word but not the concept. Aside from this we, as racial-nationalists recognise that individuals, just as races, differ in intelligence and capability as well as in other characteristics. In other words we accept that people are fundamentally unequal.

EQUAL SAY

To support an electoral system that gives anyone who has reached his or her 18th birthday, regardless of intelligence, character, morality, training, achievement or common sense an equal say in the direct election of a national government seems not only to be irresponsible but absurd. The result of this egalitarian folly is that elections are virtually an all-out lying contest between the most unprincipled scoundrels, each hoping that their lies will persuade a numerically larger portion of the electorate to vote for them rather than for the lies of their competitors. An hierarchical, or tier structure of government would remove the direct election of national government from the electorate and thereby eliminate the inherent dangers from such a form of democracy.

It is true to say that generally speaking most people are not interested nor qualified to vote on matters of national concern. What they do have an interest in is the running of their own localities. Therefore local administration should be elected and run by the local people themselves. It may be a good idea if the elected representatives of the first, most local tier of government were obliged to hold regular meetings where they would be answerable to the people for their decisions affecting the locality over the past month. As there are usually a few discerning people in each community such a face-to-face meeting should enable them to pick out the type of self-seeking careerist currently installed in all levels of government. Therefore, as each level of administration elects people out of its own ranks to go on to the next tier of government you would hopefully get the very best people rising to the top; those with proven ability and a record of achievement: a true meritocracy.

CRITICISM

The only criticism of the meritocratic system of differential voting rights, I can think of, is that the allocation of voting power, in proportion to a person's contribution to the nation, would be difficult to administer and would probably necessitate a large bureaucracy. Also, by what criteria do you 'judge a person's worth' by in order to allocate him votes. After all a humble sheep farmer may well possess more real wisdom and common sense than say a scientist, expert in only one field of research.

Despite these problems we are at least making a start in the right direction, whereby the wellbeing of our nation is secured and our people are able to have a REAL influence over their communities.

Socialism or Social Justice?

THE ILLS of British society are predominantly caused by Capitalism. But, argues Dave Shedden, Nationalism is an ideological 'third way': we must not forget that Socialism is as much an enemy of radical Nationalism as Capitalism.

WHEN arguing with Socialists about the state of Britain today, they invariably play down their own importance and point to the Capitalist control of press, industry and government. They argue that Capitalism is the cause of all evils and that all efforts must be directed against Big Business. Whilst this is true, the effect of wide-scale Socialism (or Communism as honest people call it) on the morals and thinking of large numbers of our people is too perverting to be ignored.

Take for example strikes in general, and the Coal and Print Workers' strikes in particular. In the Coal Strike we had Britain's miners up against the massed ranks of Reaction, fighting for jobs, for real communities and for the preservation of a way of life. The Left used this heroic struggle as a front for mobilising support for agitation for a general strike and thus the creation of a "revolutionary situation". The same tactics are being used in the Print Workers' strike. The Workers Revolutionary Party calls on it's supporter (!) to organise for the Print Workers, for the General Strike. Superficial concern is voiced for the people involved but the motive is always destructive – to create bitterness, to divide workers on the shop floor from workers in the offices. This stems from Socialists' views of people as part of a great, amorphous, world-wide mob of faceless beings; – the "working class".

ABYSMAL

The Nationalist response to the Coal Strike was abysmal. Split between support for the strike and a loathing of all the 'leaders' involved, we wavered and failed to come up with anything concrete until the strike was well nigh over. In theory at least we should be the only organisation that miners can support. Coming from a Northumbrian mining family, I know that mining communities are the strongest in the land. The bonds that unite mining folk – pride in their work, in their leisure – are bonds that will never be broken whilst their villages and towns remain. To the Left, a community is a group of people who happen to be resident in the same area. To us, and to mining folk, a community is a group of people with bonds that go beyond residence, to bonds forged by centuries of living, loving and toiling together. Socialists cannot understand this. So why did we lose the strike?

We lost simply because the fight against Capitalism was lead by the Left. We all know that Socialism is Capitalism's bastard son and that whatever differences exist between the two are only superficial. The antagonism between Left and Right benefits them both – strikers become more 'class conscious' and bosses worry more about the 'Red peril'. Left and Right are both so greedy that they don't go too far, in case it upsets their cosy little game. Every time it is the working people that lose.

The Print Strike is being used as a fertile ground for agitation and the spread of disaffection, but how can ordinary people ever benefit from industrial strife being used for political purposes?

CORRUPT REGIMES

Throughout the world Capitalist regimes are crumbling. Haiti and the Philippines are the latest in a long line. It is good that corrupt regimes like those of the Shah of Iran, Baby Doc Duvalier, Somoza and Marcos have all fallen but in most cases they are replaced by a Red Terror every bit as evil as the Yankee Terror that preceeded them. It is bad for freedom that the only viable opposition to Communism is the USA. The CIA backs so many brutal regimes and organisations that it is so, so easy to discredit the forces fighting Communism. The media crows about the surge of anti-Soviet feeling amongst American Youth but it is so depressing to see the ideological content of 'Rambo', 'Rocky', and 'Red Dawn'. If the only alternative to Red Terror is this moronic tripe, then the sooner we triumph, the better.

The Militant "Left" in Britain they're not working class and their creed has no appeal to progressive British workers.

Intelligent and disciplined action is needed. Propaganda needs to stress the evil of Communist ideas and militant political action must tame its violent followers on the streets. The National Revolutionary Movement has the means to win the physical struggle against the Left but at present lacks the desire to win the intellectual struggle.

During the 1970's we indulged in union-bashing on a grand scale. This was seen as an integral part of our anti-Communism. Fortunately for us, the people responsible for that have long since disappeared from our Movement. Slowly but surely our propaganda is reflecting the view that Socialism is evil and irrelevant but that social justice is an integral part of Nationalism. There lies the danger in that we could be so keen to establish our 'radical' credentials that we may stop attacking Communism as we concentrate on the more pressing fight against the repressive Tory State. This is what the Left want, as they know that we are the only force that can destroy them. We must never lose sight of the fact that both the Red Front and the forces of Reaction are the enemies of National Freedom, Social Justice and Racial Integrity.

CRUSADE

So, it falls on us to ensure that the quality of our propaganda improves dramatically, and that we take the crusade against Communism into the areas of society where it is working its evil most. Despite the fact that the Tories have a firm grip on the Establishment, the Left have virtual control of the schools, colleges and media. These institutions are where the opinions of this and future generations are being formed, we must step in and defeat liberalism and Marxism on its home ground in the Churches, Schools, Unions and Media. This can only be done by intelligent, disciplined action and by showing our genuine love for our own people.

Only when people are encouraged to think and act freely will they reject Socialism. Only when they own their own home and farm or workshop will they reject Socialism. Only when people learn to love their own family and Nation will they reject Socialism and only then, will the Nation of Britain and Europe be free.

STEVE BRADY

BRITAIN NEEDS NUCLEAR POWER

IN RECENT YEARS opposition to nuclear power has grown within Nationalist circles. But is such an opposition valid, given that the Nationalist movement is also firmly committed to the maintenance of an independent nuclear deterrent? One Nationalist who believes that opposition to nuclear power is unsound is Steve Brady. Here he argues that nuclear power will be vital to the defence of Nationalist Britain.

EVER SINCE our party was founded in 1967, the National Front has been unwavering in its support for an independent British nuclear deterrent, and its opposition to unilateral nuclear disarmament as advocated by the likes of CND. In this, as in so many of our policies, we reflect the clear view of most of our fellow countrymen. Like most Britons, we have always perceived that the defence of our nation in the nuclear age requires a nuclear strike force, and one totally under British control. Hence our widely-shared position on the nuclear issue — "No To Cruise, No to CND. Yes to an independent nuclear deterrent!"

More recently, we have seen the growth within the Party, also reflecting a widespread public feeling, of an "anti-nuclear" position, opposed not to British nuclear weapons but to British nuclear power, nuclear reactors, nuclear waste dumps etc. Those holding this position would have us accept nuclear weapons, but reject nuclear technology and close down nuclear installations such as Sellafield/Windscale, and so on. Unfortunately, such a policy of "Yes to a British bomb — no to British reactors" is incompatible with itself and hence a nonsense. For in order to maintain and effectively deploy a British nuclear deterrent, we need British reactors.

REACTORS NEEDED

For nuclear reactors and other nuclear processing plants are needed to build nuclear bombs and drive the submarines needed to launch them from. Atomic and hydrogen bombs require (in the latter case as a trigger for hydrogen fusion) a critical mass of fissile material. Two such materials are suitable: uranium 235 and plutonium-239. Both can only be obtained to "weapons-grade" standard by using advanced nuclear technology, with all that implies. 99.3% of naturally occuring uranium is uranium-238, useless for weapons purposes. To make a bomb, the concentration of the U-235 isotope must be increased from 0.7% to at least 20% (in practice, modern uranium warheads are over 90% U-235). This is achieved in an enrichment plant by turning uranium into hexaflouride gas and centrifuging it, causing the heavier U-238 containing gas molecules to separate out. Alternatively a laser beam will ionise U-235 atoms but not U-238, so the electrically-charged U-235 ions can be pulled out with an electric field.

However, plutonium-239 is better than uranium-235 for making bombs: you need less of it (only a few kilograms to make a critical mass, rather than over 20 for U-235) and you don't waste over 90% of the raw materials you make it from. In fact, you make Pu-239 from that U-238 waste: by bombarding it with neutrons in a breeder reactor you turn ordinary uniform uranium 238 into weapons-grade, 93% pure, Pu-239 In the process you can generate electrical power, which you may as well use. Thus a reactor needed to make a bomb gives you a free nuclear power programme whether you like it or not. The main bomb-making reactor in Britain is the "dreaded" Windscale/Sellafield plant: ironically the reactor about which most fuss is made is also the very one we could least afford to close down!

SUBMARINE FLEET

We also need atomic reactors to provide and reprocess the fuel needed for the nuclear submarine fleet from which our deterrent must, in the main, be launched. These subs need to be nuclear-driven, because only nuclear-power enables them to stay at sea, submerged, long enough to hide from a potential enemy and thus avoid being knocked out by a "pre-emptive strike" as land-based missiles could so easily be. And if you have nuclear submarines, you need somewhere to store the used radioactive fuel rods from their reactors. So just to keep Britain's bomb you need the full panoply of reactors, reprocessing plants and nuclear waste repositories: you might as well put them to civilian power generation use while you are about it!

If we closed down Sellafield and all other nuclear facilities in Britain, as some would have us do, we could not long maintain even our present nuclear deterrent, and we certainly could not deploy it effectively. In fact, however, for the forseeable future an NF Government would be compelled not merely to maintain our nuclear deterrent but to expand it substantially, simply in order to survive.

For, by rejecting the entire political, ideological, social, economic, racial and moral framework of a corrupt and ethnically suicidal world order, we pose a fundamental threat to that old order, in both its interlocking Capitalist and Communist manifestations, which it dare not ignore. As it does not ignore the much lesser challenge posed by White South Africa, even though the regime there has tatally conceded the very issue at stake and accepted the morality of multiracialism, quibbling only about the timetable for its implementation. We would concede them nothing, and as such the pressures exerted now on Pretoria would be trifling compared to those confronting an NF Britain. Without an effective nuclear deterrent, we could not stand alone against them. United Nations resolutions, deploring our "wicked racism" and passed with touching unaminimity by the "rival superpowers" in the Security Council and the monkey-house which is the General Assembly, would be followed not only by diplomatic and economic sanctions but by military intervention by both superpowers under a "UN" flag. Only the threat of an effective British nuclear deterrent could hold them back and save our National Revolution and our White Race.

AMERICAN BUILT

The existing British deterrent, consisting of sixty-odd American-build Polaris missiles launched from four submarines, only two of which are actually at sea at any one time, may be adequate to provide Maggie's tuppence-halfpennyworth towards Ronnie's Armageddon. It is not enough to stand off the world in arms, as we might have to. Currently, two well-placed depth charges could finish Britain as a nuclear power. As soon as we come to power, we will need to build up a far larger deterrent force as fast as we can. We will need every breeder reactor we have got. Our task will be difficult, but not impossible: we don't need to match the multi-thousand-warhead arsenals of the superpowers. We just need to make the game of crushing the National Revolution, of halting Britain's rebirth, not worth the candle.

In the age of the nuclear winter, it would not take much more nuclear megatonnage for a Nationalist Britain to make the ultimate threat upon which all nuclear deterrence is based — "Leave me alone or I'll kill us all!" — and make it stick. After all, if any racial nationalist rebirth — presumably not just in Britain — is going to be stopped dead at the start our Race is doomed to extinction anyway and we have nothing to lose. But we need not, given an effective deterrent, resort to such an ultimate act of desperation.

To keep the wolves from our throat we need not threaten the whole world — only a few influential parts of it. For example, one of our likely potential enemies might not like a racially-based National Homeland for the British people existing. But they would like their own correspoding State not existing, save as radioactive rubble, a whole lot less! Nor would America pay for the return of its British "aircraft carrier" with a substantial proportion of its cities. Nor would the Soviets pay for Britain with several of their cities — or, possibly, with anything. Given an adequate nuclear force — and the atomic reactors that requires — our society and our people would be safe.

If our Nation, and our National Revolution, is to survive, it must be defended. If it is to be defended effectively, we need a nuclear deterrent. That needs a nuclear industry, which in the process generates civilian electrical power. Certainly we can, and must, seek to make that nuclear industry safer, and deal effectively with legitimate public concern — as opposed to scientifically illiterate hysteria — about it. But we cannot, we dare not, close it down. Like it or not, Britain NEEDS nukes. Jumping on a populist "anti-nuclear" bandwagon now may win us votes in the short term. But in the long term it will cost us the National Revolution, the survival of the British Nation, and the future of the White Race.

RAPE & PILLAGE

FORTY YEARS AGO Britain and her allies were supposed to have won the war. It wasn't until well afterwards, with Britain's power in the world diminished and her economy collapsing, that it became obvious that Britain and her people had been duped; they hadn't won the war for Britain, they had won it for the forces of international capitalism.

Now, forty years on, Britain is paying the price in immigrants and unemployment. But while the British race is being ravaged and British industry is being injured, the British countryside is also paying capitalism's price. Since the end of World War Two the beauty of the British countryside has been raped and pillaged.

The catalogue of abuse is as follows:–

1. The destruction of hedgerows the home of so much of our wildlife. At the end of the war we had 500,000 miles of hedgerow in England and Wales. Every year from 1946 to 1974, 4,000 miles of it were removed by capitalist farming operations, ie. 'agri-business'.

It is difficult to tell how fast hedgerow is disappearing in the 1980's but the Council for the Protection of Rural England (CPRE) states that "hedgerow loss is continuing at an alarming rate and has increased in counties previously not seriously affected, e.g. Yorkshire and Warwickshire."

EVIDENCE

Other evidence uncovered by the CPRE shows that, in Cambridgeshire and Huntingdonshire, the average field size has more than doubled between 1945 and 1983. Indeed, a survey of one parish in Suffolk shows that in 1950 there were 56.6 miles of hedgerow which, by 1982, had shrunk to 26.8 miles. And this parish, says the CPRE, is better off than many parishes in Suffolk where hedgerow losses have been up to 80%.

2. The destruction of ancient woodlands. The Nature Conservancy Council has demonstrated that perhaps as much as half of our ancient semi-natural woodland has been lost in the past 30 to 40 years – as much as was lost in the previous four centuries.

3. The destruction of ponds. It is reckoned that half the field ponds in south and east England have disappeared since the war. One parish in Bedfordshire, says the CPRE, seems typical: in 1950 there were 103 ponds; in 1980 there were 49.

4. The destruction of footpaths. In April this year, the Countryside Commission produced a report which showed that in various study areas from Lincolnshire to Dorset, 59 per cent of the public rights of way crossing arable land had been ploughed and not restored.

5. The destruction of moorland. A staggering 25 per cent of the open moorland on the north Yorkshire moors was destroyed by the intensification of agriculture and by forestry plantation between 1950 and 1979. And an almost equally depressing 20 per cent of the open moor of Exmoor was destroyed between 1947 and 1976.

6. The destruction of wetlands. In the 1970's an area of wetlands the size of the Isle of Wight was drained every four years.

7. The destruction of meadows. Probably 95 per cent of the herb-rich lowland meadows in the UK have been destroyed since 1947.

Neither is this horrific catalogue of abuse the end of the story. It goes on and on: the otter has become rare or has disappeared in many parts of England and Wales; frogs are scarce; four of our twelve reptiles and amphibians are endangered.

POISONS

However, capitalist agri-business doesn't stop at ripping up hedgerow, ploughing over footpaths, draining ponds and wetlands, or destroying wildlife. On top of all this, agri-business is saturating the land with poisons, killing the multitude of animals and plants which live on the once-rich soil of Britain. For instance, 860,000 tons of artificial chemical fertilisers were spread on the land in 1952. By 1982 the dosage of chemical poison had almost trebled to 2,356,000 tons.

When all the above is taken into account it can be seen how agri-business is mutilating the face of the British countryside. Unless something is done to end the pillage for profit outlook of agri-businesses, nothing will be able to stop Capitalism the Destroyer from completing its rape of this once green and pleasant land.

ON THE GREEN FRONT

ACID EARTH

FOLLOWING much discussion world-wide about the causes and effects of acid rain the environmental agency Earthscan, which is backed by the United Nations, has produced a book on the subject called Acid Earth. It concludes that unless drastic measures are enforced within the next few years to curb the sulphur dioxide emissions from power stations, road and rail transport, etc, then the effects on the economies of most countries, but particularly European countries will be catastrophic.

The effects of acid rain will soon be felt by farmers as the acidity level of the soil rises made worse by the continuous use of the same fields for the same type of crop each year, combined with the extensive use of artificial fertilizers and the mounting effects of yearly straw and stubble burning. In addition the timber trade will be hit as more and more trees are killed by the acid rain-falls, and the tourist trade will be affected as the countryside becomes less beautiful and as our famous landmarks and historic buildings are destroyed.

In the book Britain is singled out for particular concern because considering the fact that we are the world's fourth largest emitter of sulphur dioxide the government has taken very little action to even study ways of curbing the pollution. This is partially due to the lack of effective environmental pressure groups on the subject, but mostly due to the penny-pinching method of financial management which Maggie Thatcher has introduced. Under her direction Government does not spend any money unless the immediate financial gain because of that spending can be seen. Therefore, because of the very large costs involved in reducing pollution the Government ignores the problem in the hope that it will go away.

It will not go away, and only a complete change in our attitude to the environment in which we live, together with a respect for nature and severe restrictions on the causes of sulphur dioxide pollution will ensure that there is any countryside left for future generations of Britons to inherit.

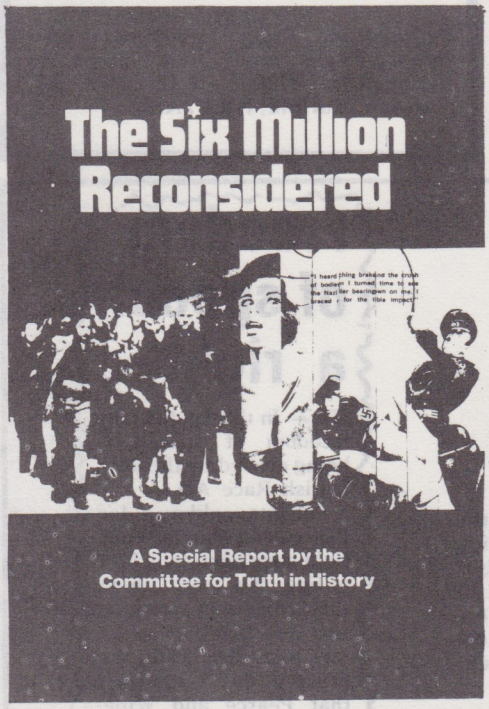
THE NATIONALIST BOOKSHOP

50 PAWSONS ROAD, CROYDON, SURREY CRO 2QF.

Nationalist Books is Britain's only patriotic bookshop. As well as offering a mail-order service we also welcome customers to our shop at 50, Pawsons Road, Croydon, Surrey CRO 2QF. We are open Monday – Friday, 10.00a.m. to 6.00p.m., and from 11.00a.m. to 4.00p.m. on Saturdays.

The books listed below are just a sample of those stocked on the subject of Revisionist History.

Please note that all cheques should be made payable to "Nationalist Books.

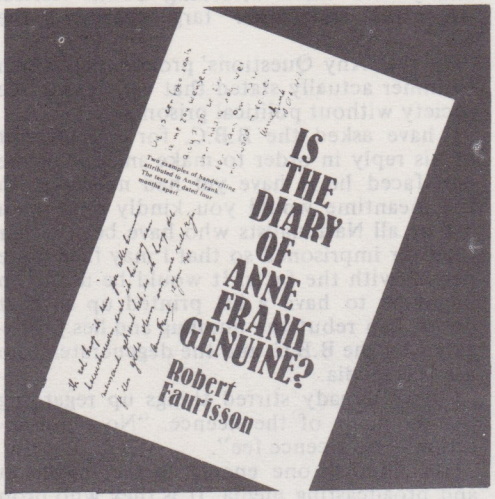


THE SIX MILLION RECONSIDERED Committee for Truth in History. £3.50 inc. postage.

Profusely illustrated this magazine-format volume examines the "Holocaust" legend in the light of an examination of Jewish history and psychology.

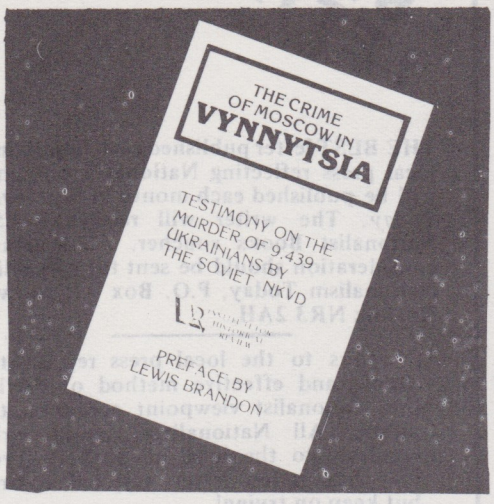
DEALING IN HATE. Dr. Michael F. Connors. £2.50 inc postage.

An excellent study of anti-German propaganda, especially during and since the last World War, this book also explains why Governments have found it expedient to foster "Germanophobia".



IS THE DIARY OF ANNE FRANK GENUINE. Dr. Robert Faurisson. £4.00 inc postage.

The heart-rending tale of little Anne Frank is often used to indoctrinate Europeans against "the horrors o racism". But is the book a forgery Dr Faurisson, an expert in th appraisal and evaluation of texts and documents, believes it is a forgery, and in this booklet he gives the evidence to prove his case.



THE HOAX OF THE 20TH CENTURY Prof. A.R. Butz. £3.00 inc postage.

This classic work is probably one of the most influential Revisionist History books ever written. It comprehensively and clinically examines the claim that 6 million Jews were systematically exterminated during the last World War. Butz conscientiously and carefully demolishes this Zionist propaganda myth, explaining how and why it was created.

YESTERDAY & TOMORROW. Rising Press. £2.75 inc p & p.

This collection of pre-war essays by various European nationalists has had a tremendous influence on the process of ideological development in revolutionary nationalist circles in Britain. The book includes works by Chesterton, Strasser, Morris, Lymington, Codreanu and Blatchford; a vital work for the library of every patriot. Easy to read and highly informative.

THE CRIME OF MOSCOW IN VYNNTSIA. Institute for Historical Review. £3. 25 inc. postage.

According to Lenin "three-quarters of mankind must die, if necessary, to ensure the other quarter for Communism." This book is a damning indictment of an atrocity perpetrated for the sake of Communism: – the murder of 9,439 Ukrainians by the Soviet NKVD at Katyn.

NATIONAL SUICIDE. Anthony C. Sutton. £4.50 inc. postage.

Facts and figures detail how the United States government and major U.S. companies help to sustain and build the Soviet war machine.

THE RESTORATION OF PROPERTY. Hilaire Belloc. £3.00 inc postage.

A description of the alternative to Capitalism and Communism.

1957 – BEFORE THE STORM. Paul Comben. £1.20 inc. postage.

A slim volume of poetry written by a new and interesting poet. Covers Love, Life and War.

CAMP OF THE SAINTS. Jean Raspail. £3.30 inc. p & p.

A novel written in the early Seventies predicting the arrival of a mass flotilla from the Third World on the shores of Europe: Raspail asked what the reaction of Europeans would be? This book should be read by all patriots.

CONGRATULATIONS

Dear Sir,

I would like to congratulate Nationalism Today on being an excellent journal which, in today's confusion of synthetic media mis-information reads through clearly and distinctly, as its writers have surely learnt to 'feel' with their blood.

There is in the racial life of a nation a natural antipathy to alien culture, artifice and mass-production. To deny it is to live a lie.

With so much dish-water coursing through the veins of national life it is refreshing to read sane and genuine views to be found in Nationalism Today.

Thank you for restoring faith.

With Racial Regards,

Gilbert Taylor.
Dorset.

BRAINWASHING

Dear NT,

Far from being 'stupid and inconsequential' in his examples of the ubiquitous benign immigrants on Television programmes, Tom Holmes (Letters, Issue 36) cogently highlighted the sinister campaign of multi-racial brainwashing being waged by the TV overlords.

Whenever challenged as to why these un-British types appear on their transmissions the equally unBritish Television hierarchies say that Britain is a cosmopolitan society, and they must reflect that. But the fact that the Blackish Brigade are invariably cast as benevolent, law-abiding folk, and rarely portrayed in a bad light brazenly contravenes the TV Bosses own criteria for featuring the aliens in the first place: to show Britain as it is!

The television medium's suppression and gross misrepresentation of the racial issue is comparable to the news censorship practised in the Communist East European tyrannies. And considering the ethnic constitution of the top UK TV personnel, that's probably the region where they originate from.

Sincerely Yours,

Geoff Coyne,
Liverpool.

POLITICAL PRISONERS

Dear Sir,

There has been a growing eagerness for our mealy mouthed politicians to portray this country as an example of liberty, freedom and justice when attacking South Africa, Argentina and other targets around the world.

On the 'Any Questions' programme Selwin Gummer actually stated that we were a free society without political prisoners.

I have asked the B.B.C. for a transcript of his reply in order to make an issue of the bare-faced lie. I have yet had no reply. In the meantime would you kindly send me a list of all Nationalists who have been either fined or imprisoned so that I may face these people with the facts. It would be useful to members to have a list printed up so that others can rebut the humbug and lies propagated by the B.B.C. and the degenerates who use this media.

I have already stirred things up regarding the payment of the licence. "No representation – No licence fee".

Our number one enemy is the television and broadcasting media. It is they who prop up our atrocious political system, but ostracising British nationalists or equating us with mindless thugs.

So as I see it, the media has to be our primary target by exposing the lies and humbug which spews out daily to our gullible public.

The media does to Britain, what AIDS does to the human body. It robs it of all defences. That is why our leaders get away with it.

Yours faithfully,

Brian Loder,
Torquay.

EDITORS NOTE:–

Apart from Joe Pearce the most blatant example of Establishment persecution of a Nationalist is the case of Ian Stuart Donaldson. Better known simply as Ian Stuart, the lead singer of the band 'Skrewdriver' this Nationalist's "crime" was to try and calm down a fight between Black and White youths near King's Cross, London. But because Ian's patriotic lyrics had turned thousands of White Youth to Nationalism the State decided to "get" him. They claimed he attacked the Blacks with a bottle – even though the Blacks themselves denied this. They also claimed that Ian's fingerprints had been on the bottle, but that they had been "accidently" wiped off, while the bottle was in the possession of the police.

Nationalism Today* welcomes your views! Please send your letters to Nationalism Today, P.O. Box 41, Norwich, Norfolk, NR3 2AH.

STAR LETTER

THE BEST letter published each month in the local press reflecting National Front policy will be published each month in Nationalism Today. The writer will receive a £5.00 Nationalist Books voucher. All letters for consideration should be sent to: The Editor, Nationalism Today, P.O. Box 41, Norwich, Norfolk NR3 2AH.

Letters to the local press represent a simple and effective method of getting the Nationalist viewpoint across to the public. All Nationalists should write regularly to the local newspaper – you may have a few letters rejected at first, but keep on trying!

This month's winner is Norman Tompkinson, who had his letter published in the Solihull Daily Times, and who sent the following modest covering letter:–

Dear Sir,

How about sending me a £5 Nationalist Books voucher for my excellent letter which was printed in the Solihull Daily Times today?

Yours sincerely,

N. Tompkinson,
Solihull.

Freedom of speech a right

SIR — In this land of ours freedom of speech is being eroded by the anti-British Race Act.

Patriots like Joe Pearce and Martin Wingfield have been jailed for telling the truth about the problem of immigration and black crimes.

In both their trails, the prosecution admitted that Pearce and Wingfield had written the truth, yet under these Race Acts the truth is illegal. Where is the logic? What has happened to British justice?

Ray Honeyford received a £150,000 pay off, Martin Wingfield received three months and Joe Pearce received 12 months.

I am afraid democracy has gone down the drain. Freedom of speech should be a right not a crime. We fought two world wars to defend that right, now it has gone — M Tomkinson, Damson Lane, Solihull.

BEATING THE RETREAT

THE AIR was filled with flying bricks and petrol bombs as communist agitators, with others, charged a police line in Brixton. Finally, one young constable's nerve broke and dropping his shield, he fled in terror down a street and cowered in a shop doorway.

Shortly, there happened along a supervisory officer who said "Come on lad. Pull yourself together and don't be so frightened".

"Sorry, Sergeant," The young constable stammered, "I don't know what came over me".

"I'm not your Sergeant, I'm an Inspector", the supervisory officer replied.

"Bloody hell!" exclaimed the constable "I didn't realise I'd run that far back!"

Dear NT,

I enclose two drawings by the Nationalist illustrator "JDF". One is of an English worker, the other of a Palestinian Freedom Fighter. I wonder if by any chance they are related? I think we should be told.

Confused of East London.

Race mixing— Older than you think

RACE MIXING goes back a lot further in human history than you might think. This was the discovery published in the Journal of Molecular Evolution by Japanese biologists. By studying the DNA genetic material in the mitochondria of cells, the scientists have discovered that 2,700,000 years ago our proto-human ancestors Negroes having not yet evolved, were in the habit of having sexual intercourse with chimpanzees. Viable human-ape half-castes often resulted, it seems. The biologists believe that most of the inter-mixing involved hominid mates and chimp females. Nowadays, of course, it is more usually the other way round.

Industrial Front

Nationalist workers - Get organised

Leyland workers are patriotic.

THE ATTEMPTED Government sell-out of Land Rover, together with Leyland Buses and Trucks, shows just how much the Government cares about British industry – nothing at all. But Government plans to sell our industry to the highest bidders has backfired on them, as it has stirred up massive public opposition. In Solihull, while Land Rover awaits its fate, the workers have voted overwhelmingly to stay British, and literature has been circulated, and posters pasted up, saying "Keep Leyland British!"

This is just the political situation that Nationalist workers must take advantage of, to promote the policies of Britain for the British; workers co-operatives and anti-marxism/capitalism. These policies will win a positive response from workforces, and help boost recruitment. This could lead to Nationalist control of individual factory floors, and ultimately perhaps even particular industries.

INSTANT RESPONSE

National Front Trades Unionists cannot let these opportunities pass us by: whenever a factory is threatened instant-response style leaflets, rallies and pickets must be organised, while at the same time members must keep in touch with the workforce. The Reds have been using this method, with many successes for many years now. It's about time that we took a leaf out of their book and fought back to save British industry, not so that politicians can control it, which is why the Reds do it, but to keep the industry for the workers and the nation.

Such actions should be started initially by the Branches, and then expanded regionally or nationally, depending on the importance of the industry. We must also build up a Nationalist Trades Union organisation. This should be started by Branches obtaining details of where their members/supporters work, and to which union they belong. This could be collated nationally, so the Party can monitor where its strengths lie, and be able to take advantage of them. Again this is what the Reds have been doing – we must copy their tactics in order to combat them. We must learn from their mistakes though, and not call for any action in the workforce unless we are certain of majority support – a trap the Reds have fallen into on many occasions.

The T.U.C. is beginning to fall apart at the seams, with some Unions openly defying Congress rules. The time is right for us to start getting active in the Trades Union Movement – we have sat back for too long.

NF policy WORKS

PROOF that the National Front policy concerning small industries, and the promotion of rural crafts, works is shown by the efforts of the Council for Small Industries in Rural Areas (CoSIRA).

In the past ten years CoSIRA has helped 25,000 small rural firms which now employ more than 150,000 people.

CoSIRA's official role is to regenerate rural areas and to create viable and prosperous communities which it has done with great success. CoSIRA helps rural firms with loans, advice and training. Its advice is mainly based on accountancy and marketing. Grants are given to master craftsman to take on teenagers for employment and instruction, backed up by courses under CoSIRA's new Entrant's Training Scheme for 120 trainees a year in drystone walling, upholstery, building, reinforced plastics and agricultural machinery repairs.

SKILLED PEOPLE

CoSIRA is charged with helping companies with not more than 20 skilled people, in country towns with not more than 10,000 people and in rural areas. Only a fifth of the firms it helps employs more than ten people. CoSIRA uses existing, often derelict, buildings to house the companies that it helps. This has three main advantages: Conversion of redundant buildings into workshops preserves the fabric of buildings that are sympathetic to the countryside, which otherwise would be left to rot or be demolished; it provides employment to local builders during conversion; and it provides much needed starter premises.

The conversion of such a building is also an advantage to the farmer who owns it, who receives rent from those using it. In the year 1984/5 CoSIRA reported record activity and demand for its services. It is currently giving advice to 18,000 firms employing 88,000 people. It gave £1.42 million in grants to 365 recipients to convert redundant buildings, altogether lending £3.47 million.

In doing so it has helped stem the flow of skilled youngsters to the towns. They can now seek employment in firms ranging from high technology to rural crafts on their door step, working in a pleasant environment with a small firm where they know all their fellow workers personally. This gives greater job satisfaction, which in turn means the goods they produce are of a good standard, which is in high demand in a world of mass-produced rubbish.

CoSIRA has helped prove that NF policy works; Russia and the Eastern Bloc, with their chronic shortage of household goods and long waiting list for such 'luxuries' as cars, has proved that marxism doesn't work. The massive debt and unemployment problems of the Western countries proves that capitalism doesn't work. Only our policies work:– it's always pleasant to be able to tell others that "I told you so!"

JOIN THE NATIONAL FRONT TRADE UNIONISTS

The patriotic response of Leyland workers to the threat of an American take-over at Land Rover shows the latent Nationalism of British Workers. It's time for Nationalist Workers to organise!

Good news from Joe

We are glad to report that the story about Joe Pearce that appeared in the last issue of NT was unduly pessimistic. Joe recently wrote to NT Editor, Keiron Richards, explaining that most of the fears about the prison conditions under which he is being held are unfounded, at least for the present.

Joe still faces many months of imprisonment under Britain's repressive Race Laws, simply for telling the truth about multi-racialism. All Nationalists are asked to send him letters of support. His address is:

L25819 Pearce,
Hut Cells,
HMP Stanford Hill,
Church Road,
Eastchurch,
Sheerness,
Kent ME 12 4AA.

The following is the text of Joe's letter.

Dear Keiron,

Thanks for sending me Nationalism Today; I am always pleased to receive it and look forward to settling down in my cell to read it each month.

I would however like to clarify the somewhat distorted impression of my present prison sentence which was published in your March issue. Contrary to what was reported the activities of the so-called "December 12th Group" have not affected my status here in any tangible way. It goes without saying that I condemn in the most forthright terms possible the self-styled activities of this "Group", and it is true that I was concerned that the publicity such activities aroused could jeopardise my ability to get out on the occasional work party. However my fears in this respect proved unfounded.

Neither has the adverse publicity surrounding the "December 12th Group" led to the prison's large Black population getting to know who I am. The fact is that many of the Black prisoners here already knew who I was long before the appearance of this "Group" on the scene. For instance one Black prisoner informed me that he had seen my picture on the cover of Time Out magazine. He implied heavily that there were a few people in the prison camp who'd like to "get me". However when I told him I'd take my chances he didn't seem overkeen on pursuing the point, not having any of his mates with him at the time. Since then, thankfully, I've had no hint of any trouble, although of course the possibility is always present.

I hope that the above will help clarify any misconceptions which may have arisen out of your report, on my present circumstances, in your March issue.

Finally, I'd like take the opportunity to thank all those people who've taken the trouble to write to me over the last three months. I've received hundreds upon hundreds of cards and letters, and the messages of support in them have helped tremendously in keeping my spirits up.

It goes without saying that my determination to carry the fight to the enemies of our nation remains undaunted. All that I ask is that Nationalists increase their efforts to fight for what we all believe in, and hopefully it won't be long before I am able to join you all again in our Common Struggle.

Yours as ever,
Joe Pearce.

heritage

Heritage is a regular series which looks at the heritage and culture of the British Isles. This article was written by Keiron Richards.

1986 sees the nine-hundredth anniversary of the Domesday Book, a unique document which describes old English society in minute detail.

Nineteen years after the Battle of Hastings (see 'Heritage', in issue 37) King William faced the threat of invasion from Norwegians. William hired so many mercenary troops to face a threat that failed to materialise, that he had to billet them on his Barons. The number each Baron had to take was proportionate to the taxable value of his land. This drew William's attention to the incompleteness of his knowledge of the conditions in his realm.

PAINSTAKING

The following year, 1066, King William sent Commissioners throughout his lands to make a socio-economic survey of England that was so detailed, thorough, painstaking and accurate that centuries were to elapse before anything like this was to be produced anywhere in Europe. Indeed it was still used as a basis for tax assessment until the time of King Henry VIII.

While gathering information about land ownership the Commissioners acted as judges in cases of dispute. There was no appeal from the authority of the register they were compiling. Thus the populace, comparing it to the Day of Judgement, called it the 'Domesday Book'.

DOUBLE CHECK

The Commissioners returns to William were arranged by hundred, and by county. To ensure total accuracy William had a second set of Commissioners check the work of the first. Once the necessary corrections and abridgements had been made the results were incorporated into two volumes, totalling two million words, all carefully written with a sharpened goose quill. One volume 'Little Domesday' covered East Anglia, whilst 'Great Domesday' covered the rest of William's realm.

Nine hundred years after it was first compiled the Public Records Office, in whose trust the book is held, is having it rebound yet again, this time in five volumes to facilitate its use by researchers. This summer the Public Records Office is putting on a major exhibition of the book, but the exhibition will also be about the countryside and people in 1066.

The exhibition will take place at the Public Records Office, Chancery Lane, London WC2, from 3rd April to 30th September. It should prove of interest to all those who care about our heritage

Chairman fudges stance on violence

THE CHAIRMAN of the National Front, Mr. Martin Wingfield, yesterday refused to condemn all violent acts by his members.

He had told a Yorkshire Post reporter that: "The National Front doesn't support violence of any sort, it is totally alien to everything that British people believe."

But later, when he was challenged over convictions for violence among some prominent Front members, he changed his statement and condemned "mindless" violence.

He said that there were circumstances where the National Front disciplinary hearings which adjudicate in the event of a member being threatened with expulsion from the party because of violent acts — would find violence excuseable: "If someone was being attacked at a march or if he was protecting his mates."

BEHIND THE NATIONAL FRONT

Getting t... Bloody...

THE annual march in London to commemorate the Bloody Sunday shootings in Londonderry 14 years ago is a popular day out with members of Leeds branch of the National Front. In the eyes of NF members, pro-Irish marchers are synonomous with the IRA and communism, and as such offer a ...imate target for the boot ...ottle.

...ge numbers of Front members ...rinking in the Whip public ...on the day before this march were eagerly discussing the prospect of mixing it ...the "Reds" on the NF's ...arch.

...eds Young NF organ... "The Met (Metropoli... ...ave enough gaps to get some ...boot into those Fenian bastards."

Effigy of an IRA gunman hoisted aloft during the NF demonstration.

Fanatic who enjoys trouble

FRANK BURDEN

"THE BEST thing that could happen to us. It makes the blacks look bad and the police were on the receiving end."

Frank Charles Burden was deliberating on the riots in Handsworth, Birmingham, the bread and butter of Front propaganda. Burden was right.

A month later the Front magazine, Nationalism Today, printed an open letter carefully couched in conciliatory tone

THE Yorkshire Post can reveal disturbing evidence that a restyled National Front is forging links with the Loyalist paramilitary in Northern Ireland and is actively recruiting on behalf of the gunmen of the Ulster Defence Association.

Last night information gathered by two Yorkshire Post reporters working undercover within the National Front for the past six months was being investigated by West Yorkshire Special Branch.

The material included literature urging NF members to join the UDA and be trained to fight in Ulster.

This is one of a series of sinister new developments in the organisation of the National Front, since a leadership coup two years ago.

The aim is to broaden the appeal of the party to a wider cross-section of the community, to special interest groups, and most importantly an alienated youth facing long term unemployment.

The message is being projected via a more sophisticated propaganda machine than ever before.

A constant stream of cleverly phrased handbills are fed to party branches nationwide, tapping into the British sense of fair play on issues of the day from Halal meat to the IRA.

The party's newspapers, National Front News and Bulldog (paper of the Young NF), are well laid out in contrast to the amateurish efforts of the past, while a range of glossy magazines carry lengthy theoretical writings.

In the Front's glossy magazine Nationalism Today parallels are drawn with the Samurai warriors and the Spartans of Greece, while Gadaffi and Iranian fundamentalists are defied in meandering feature articles. It is all part of the new leadership's campaign to reshape the image of the Front as a more potent revolutionary force.
